Our Docket: 020356 116 P2

Dear Buddy:

Once again I enclose a copy of the above-identified application and a "Declaration" that has been prepared for your signature. Please review the application and sign the Declaration as soon as possible and return the signed Declaration to me via facsimile or mail.

As you know, you have assigned your rights in the above-identified application to ISG Resources, Inc. (ISG). A copy of the Assignment is enclosed. If you do not sign the enclosed Declaration, ISG will enforce the Assignment, specifically the clause of which that indicates your obligation to "sign all papers, and make all rightful oaths, and do all acts which said Assignee, its successors or assigns, may consider necessary in connection with said United States application..."

Clinton W. Pike
May 13, 2003

The technology represented by the application is a valuable asset owned by ISG and your breach of the obligations as set forth in the attached Assignment is serious and will cause severe financial damage to ISG. Suit brought against you by ISG to enforce the Assignment and any other rights that it may have against you shall seek to recover these damages, attorneys' fees, and punitive damages.

Sincerely,

WEGMAN, HESSLER & VANDERBURG

May 15, 2003

Dear Bruce,

As you are aware, I am no longer an employee of ISG and have not been since January 2001. During the time I was employed by ISG and receiving compensation from ISG, as their Executive Vice President, I signed the Assignment as a part of a process we were undertaking to develop the possible patent you say you have now filed application for. This application is a far cry from being issued as a utility patent. In fact I have only read the draft for this once, that being during the year 2000. When I left the company in 2001, in order to continue my economic viability, I started my own company built on technology and have been involved in several patents being issued and pursued since then.

Your comment about the technology and my breach causing severe financial damage to ISG is ridiculous. No damage can occur on a paper purporting technology that has more of a chance of being rejected, than allowed, as a patent, much less enforced. They own nothing until or if this reaches a conclusion involving issuance of a valid patent. They are covered by the Priority date if it is issued. The art is full of existing patents of this very nature. It will take skilled crafting to try and get this patent issued. I should know since I am the principal inventor. Also, your comment, "Once again..." is uncalled for. I still have the package from your April 22, 2003, mailing and just related this to you yesterday by phone. You are well aware that I had issues concerning this potential patent as I have discussed it with you and sent information about this, to you previously. I am sorry you lost my email when you moved and I will endeavor to recover it, for you. I am surprised that something of such value to ISG, as you state in your letter, has taken this long to get to the position we are at today. Since October, 1999, I had not received any contact concerning this issue until your certified letter in June of 2002. I responded to your letter then and did not hear from you again until your April 22, 2003, letter. This does not indicate a sense of urgency to me.

I have given the rights to this patent, if patented, to ISG but now have no compensation to receive for furthering the development and potential issuance of this document to the ultimate aspect of a utility patent. In fact, by law; I do not have to sign my name to any document I do not feel is accurate, has unknown validity to its claims, and may have inaccurate and untruthful information supplied to back up such claims. Since I have not read the document, I am sure it has changed since the October, 2000, draft and probably contains new or changed information that I may or may not agree to. Here is what I would be willing to do should ISG compensate me as indicated below:

1. Review the document in detail and provide my comments concerning the text and information as written.
2. Provide ongoing support towards the finalization of the patent application and my time and efforts towards getting this application through the approval process as best as I can, fully supporting the process.

In order to accomplish this ISG will compensate my efforts as follows:

- a. All expenses, should any occur, will be paid by ISG to include phone, copying, travel expenses, lodging and food expenses and any other expenses related to the review and development of this application to its ultimate fate.
- b. ISG will compensate me up front $5,000 for the patent application review and any changes made to the application for accuracy and examiner critique. After I am sure the information is accurate and truthful I will execute the declaration.
- c. When the examiner begins his process and I am needed for rebuttal I will require an additional $5,000 up front before I will defend and reorganize to try and obtain agreement from the examiner. I will do my utmost to obtain examiner allowance and the patent being issued but obviously cannot guarantee anything on the patent being awarded.

Bruce, after you have discussed this with ISG let me know what they want to do. I can do all my work through you so no contact would be required with ISG, as I have completed selection of contingency legal support for proceeding forward on another legal issue with ISG, that will be forthcoming by June 2003.

Sincerely,

Clinton Pike
